Description	Whether you're a novice or a seasoned editor, a would-be writer, or a business manager supervising others' writing, this workshop will help you make your words work better. This approach to editing uses a step-by-step process to identify the most common obstacles to readers' understanding and shows you quick and simple techniques to fix them. By the end of the day, you'll know how to edit a piece of writing without rewriting and making the author's life miserable. Jim Taylor, co-founder of the publishing house Wood Lake Books, has published more than 200 titles. He has written or ghost-written 17 books, over 500 magazine articles, and over 1000 weekly newspaper columns. Jim has offered his Eight Step Editing workshop for the Editors' Association of Canada in major centres across Canada since 1985. He estimates that more than 3,000 editors and would-be editors have learned from his approach - but he also claims to learn as much as he teaches.
